As part of any recruitment process, UCP collects and processes personal data relating to job applicants. UCP is committed to being transparent about how it collects and uses that data and to meeting its data protection obligations.

What information do we collect about you?

UCP collects a range of information about you. This includes:

- your name, address and contact details, including email address and telephone number;
- details of your qualifications, skills, experience and employment history;
- information about your current level of remuneration, including benefit entitlements;
- whether or not you have a disability for which the Employer needs to make reasonable adjustments during the recruitment process; and
- information about your entitlement to work in the UK.

UCP may collect this information in a variety of ways. For example, data might be contained in application forms, CVs or resumes, obtained from your passport or other identity documents, or collected through interviews or other forms of assessment.

UCP may also collect personal data about you from third parties, such as references supplied by former employers, information from employment background check providers and information from criminal records checks. UCP will seek information from third parties only once a job offer to you has been made and will inform you that it is doing so.

Data will be stored in a range of different places, including on your application record, in HR management systems and on other IT systems including email.

Why do we collect information about you?

UCP needs to process data to take steps at your request prior to entering into a contract with you. It may also need to process your data to enter into a contract with you.

In some cases, UCP needs to process data to ensure that it is complying with its legal obligations. For example, it is required to check a successful applicant's eligibility to work in the UK before employment starts.

UCP has a legitimate interest in processing personal data during the recruitment process and for keeping records of the process. Processing data from job applicants allows UCP to manage the recruitment process, assess and confirm a candidate's suitability for employment and decide to whom to offer a job. UCP may also need to process data from job applicants to respond to and defend against legal claims.

UCP may process special categories of data, such as information about ethnic origin, sexual orientation or religion or belief, to monitor recruitment statistics. It may also collect information about whether or not applicants are disabled to make reasonable adjustments for candidates who have a disability. UCP processes such information to carry out its obligations and exercise specific rights in relation to employment.

For some roles, UCP is obliged to seek information about criminal convictions and offences. Where the Employer seeks this information, it does so because it is necessary for it to carry out its obligations and exercise specific rights in relation to employment.

UCP will not use your data for any purpose other than the recruitment exercise for which you have applied.

Who do we share your information with?

Your information may be shared internally for the purposes of the recruitment exercise. This includes members of the HR and recruitment team, interviewers involved in the recruitment process, managers in the business area with a vacancy and IT staff if access to the data is necessary for the performance of their roles.

UCP will not share your data with third parties, unless your application for employment is successful and UCP makes you an offer of employment. UCP will then share your data with former employers to obtain references for you, employment background check providers to obtain necessary background checks and the Disclosure and Barring Service to obtain necessary criminal records checks.

UCP will not transfer your data outside the European Economic Area.

How do we protect your information?

UCP takes the security of your data seriously. It has internal policies and controls in place to ensure that your data is not lost, accidentally destroyed, misused or disclosed, and is not accessed except by our employees in the proper performance of their duties.

For how long do we hold your information?

If your application for employment is unsuccessful, UCP will hold your data on file for up to one year after the end of the relevant recruitment process. At the end of that period or once you withdraw your consent, your data is deleted or destroyed.

If your application for employment is successful, personal data gathered during the recruitment process will be transferred to your personnel file and retained during your employment. The periods for which your data will be held will be provided to you in a new privacy notice.

Your rights

As a data subject, you have a number of rights. You can:

- access and obtain a copy of your data on request;
- require the Employer to change incorrect or incomplete data;
- require the Employer to delete or stop processing your data, for example where the data is no longer necessary for the purposes of processing; and
- object to the processing of your data where the Employer is relying on its legitimate interests as the legal ground for processing.

If you would like to exercise any of these rights, please contact The Data Protection Officer.

If you believe that the Employer has not complied with your data protection rights, you can complain to the Information Commissioner.

What if you do not provide personal data?

You are under no statutory or contractual obligation to provide data to UCP during the recruitment process. However, if you do not provide the information, UCP may not be able to process your application properly or at all.
